- e-Governance can be defined as the application of information and communication technology (ICT) for providing government services, exchange of information, transactions, integration of previously existing services and information portals.
- The "e" in e-Governance stands for 'electronic'.

The Council of Europe referred to e-Governance as:

- The use of electronic technologies in three areas of public action:
 - relations between the public authorities and civil society
 - the functioning of the public authorities at all stages of the democratic process (electronic democracy)

 - e-administration and e-services together constitute what is largely termed as e-government.
- e-Governance: The use of IT to improve the ability of the government to address the needs of society.
 - It includes the publishing of policy and program-related information to transact with citizens.

- It extends beyond the provision of online services and covers the use of IT for strategic planning and reaching the development goals of the government.
- e-Democracy: The use of IT to facilitate the ability of all sections of society to participate in the governance of the state.
 - Emphasis is on bringing transparency, accountability, and participation of people.
 - It includes online disclosures of policies, online grievance redressal, e-referendums etc.

Origin

- e-Governance originated in India during the 1970s with a focus on in-house government applications in the areas of defence, economic monitoring, planning and deployment of ICT to manage data intensive functions related to elections, census, tax administration etc.

Objectives

- Better service delivery to citizens.
- Ushering in transparency and accountability.
- Empowering people through information.
- Improve efficiency within Government i.e between centre-state or inter-states.
- Improve interface with business and industry.

Pillars of e-Governance

- People
- Process
- Technology
- Resources

Types of Interaction in e-Governance

- G2G i.e. Government to Government
- G2C i.e. Government to Citizen
